Introduction

Justice for All? Still a Distant Dream in India

- India’s legal system is vast, layered, and hard to navigate.
- Over 4 crore cases pending—justice is painfully slow.
- Legal terms and procedures are too complex for most citizens.
- Rural and poor communities struggle the most.
- Lawyers are too expensive for low-income families.
- Most legal help is in English or Hindi only.
- Fear, confusion, and mistrust stop people from seeking justice.

Problem Statement

India's legal system is complex, slow, and difficult to navigate, especially for rural and underprivileged communities. Millions face unresolved issues like land disputes, domestic violence, labour abuse, and pension denial—but lack the support, awareness, or access needed to seek justice.

Core Problems

- Low Legal Awareness: 90% don't know their rights.
- Language Gap: Help is rarely available in regional languages.
- High Costs: Lawyers are unaffordable for the poor.
- Fear & Mistrust: People avoid police and courts.
- Complex Procedures: Legal steps are hard to understand.
- Lack of Access: Few legal resources in rural areas.

Objective
